“ On one of the numerous cruises Weldon and Margie shared with Ms. Wynne and me, I told Weldon that since my folks had already passed and knowing that I was still in need of upbringing, I had adopted them as my current Dad and Mom, and have cared about and enjoyed their company ever since. The last several months had been so difficult for them, but both and Wynne and I tried to help out as much as we could to assist the family.

Margie had a hard time driving the pick-up and she was so proud that she had gotten to where she could park it. She couldn't wait to show me.

We miss them both. This is a loss that one doesn't get over - you just get use to it after a while.
